

Database catalog

A catalogue of databases containing information related to injuries has been prepared by the IPRC. It is our hope that the catalog will serve to encourage and support injury prevention research.

In initially developing this catalogue, IPRC surveyed organizations and agencies by telephone throughout Raleigh, Durham, and Chapel Hill, North Carolina during the fall of 1987. Information was requested about the population covered, the kinds of injuries included, how the data were collected, the form in which the information is available (i.e. mainframe tape, microcomputer diskette) and so forth. Each completed telephone survey form provided the 1-2 page database summary description included in the catalog. Catalog entries are alphabetized by the name of the database. An index at the end of the catalog allows a search by subject.

The catalog has been updated and expanded several times since 1987. The most recent version is the fourth edition, published in 1995. We recognize that we probably have not achieved a comprehensive listing of all the available injury data and welcome the input of directory users, especially any suggestions for databases which should be included in future editions of the catalog.

If you like a copy of the catalog, write to the UNC IPRC at:
